AT BROADWAY THEATER.

Vaudeville and Motion Pictures. Crowded houses at the Broadway theater yesterday saw one of the best shows of the season. The feature act, Volta was one of the most sensational acts yet seen here He does many amusing and mystifying stunts with electric current which proves that he can pass a strong amount of volts through his body. He lights a cigarette, lights a lamp, sets fire to hand-kerchiefs held close to his fingers, nose and hair. A number of electricians inspected his apparatus after the matine.

When it comes to whirlwind dancing The Bicknells are in a class by them-selves and have as neat and classy an act as has ever been seen here. A olored entertainer who can dance and ing is found in Sam Barber. His acrooatic dance was a big applause get Nichols and Croix have a new idea in an act, working in a bare stage, then showing how easy it is to make a stage setting. The act tells the funny side of a Monday morning rehearsal showing the operatic star and the stage hand. Plenty of witty lines and songs make it a pleasing act.

Announcement is made that starting Monday there will be an entire change of plotures every day.

The pictures this week are very interesting. One showing President Taft in the far west was good, and the comedy pictures brought plenty of laughs.

BREED THEATER. Big Programme of Wild West Feature Motion Pictures.

Thursday afternoon and evening Thursday afternoon and evening witnessed the initial presentation of the unequalled programme of feature motion pictures, at the Breed theater, and the general excellence of the whole bill was remarked by nearly every one who was fortunate enough to see it. Perhaps the headliner is the great story of the wild and woolly west entitled The Ranchman's Rival, a brillant story brimful of exciting events, sowboys, helpbreadth escapes, thrilling cowboys, hairbreadth escapes, thrilling exhibitions of daring horsemanship, villain in which an automobile is chased by a mounted cowboy and captured. Two other powerful stories are on the list this week, and the dramatic portion is most complete and satis-

The second wild west picture is equally as thrilling as the first, while a very unusual story, it carries with it a tremendously strong moral, that thoroughly delights the many patrons and presents a new phase of western life.

The comedy is of the side splitting order, and the two big reels of it are one wild succession of screams of sughter, the audience being kept in a hilarious condition from scart to finish. Miss Wolcott is singing by popular request the Jewel Song from Paust, for the remainder of the week, and proving by her unexcelled singing the right to the title of prima donna, she singing later the pretty illustrated song, "I'm Awfully Glad I Met You."

The New Fashion.

"Toes out," said the old dancing master to the new pupils, and the most offensive criticism that one small boy offensive criticism that one small boy can bring against another small boy is to allege that he "toes in, just like an Injun." Yet it may be that neither the Indian nor the dancing master was authority on the best way to step, and it is certain that New York society, under the guidance of a young matron who believes in pedestrianism, is taking up the "straight walk." Set the foot in a straight line with the line of march, she says, turning the toes neither in nor out; thus the natural resiliency of the foot is brought into play. The pressure is better distributed on the ball of the foot, and the stride is not only longer and freer, but less tiring. Incidentally, physicians whisper beind their hands, the new fashion tends to discourage high heels and the slight but inevitable jar which they occasion at every step, wherefore the doctors commend it. And yet, they add, likewise in strict confidence, if any woman will stay out of doors several hours a day, as does the propenent of the straight walk, that woman also will probably enjoy as vigrerous health, no matter how she places her toes.—Boston Transcript.

Reform By Order. Ever since Japan has been a factor in international trade business men the world over have complained that no country making pretensions to civilization has produced business methods so generally dishonest. One particular accusation is that trade-marks are counterfeited and patented articles reproduced whenever profit might result from so doing. This, we are now told, is to be changed by government edict.

The statement of the island kingdom ment edict.

The statesmen of the island kingdom explain that the lack of business honor is because the Samural have nothing to do with trade, which is left to the inferior order of men who are without the high sense of honor that belongs to the ruling class. They say that these tradesmen are not immoral, but unmoral. To supply the lack of marals the minister of agriculture and commerce has issued an order to the chambers of commerce throughout the nation, admonishing them and ordering them to mend their ways and conduct their business only on "honorable" methods. Such a wholesale reform by order would hardly be successful in a western nation; it remains to be seen what will be the result in Japan.—Boston Globe.

'He's been accused of cheating the variament, hasn't he?" "Yes, out of pality ten millions or so." "Likely so to tall?" "Hardly. He's presint of the company and the largest cases "Life.

Less Noise in New Britain. People will remember the storm of jections once raised against the owing of the brickyard whistles on blowing of the brickyard whistles on the ground that it occurred early in the morning and disturbed the sleep of the people. It was quite an isoue, but not any more and perhaps not as much as the suggestion of Health Officer Bray that the blowing of factory whistles cease in New Britain as a benefit to thousands who are ill and whose recovery is looked for. It is quite a noise when one comes to think it over, and in time will probably cease. It is tending that way now. The big whistle at Russell & Erwin's is never blown now except for a fire, the bell at the screw shop with its unharmonious tones has ceased to ring, and the at the screw shop with its unharmonious tones has ceased to ring, and the employes seem to be as prompt as ever. If these immense factories can get along without this awful summons to work, why cannot other factories do so? The whole thing disturbs the morning air especially and must be a jar on the nerves of those who are ill and struggling for recovery. They present the strongest argument against its continuance that can be presented. Health Officer Bray's suggestion is being favorably commented on all over the state.—New Britain Herald.

THE WELCOME. Come in the evening or come in the morning.

Come when you're looked for, or come without warning.

Kisses and welcome you'll find here before you.

And the oftener you come here the more I'll adore you.

Light is my heart since the day we were plighted.
Red is my cheek that they told me was blighted;
The green of the trees looks far greener than ever.
And the linnets are singing, "True lovers don't sever!"

I'll pull you sweet flowers to wear if you choose them,
Or, after you've kissed them, they'll lie on my bosom,
I'll fetch from the mountain its breeze to inspire you;
I'll fetch from my fancy a tale that won't tire you.

O! your step's like the rain to the summer vexed farmer, Or saber and shield to a knight without armor, I'll sing you sweet songs till the stars rise above me.

Then, wandering, I'll wish you, in silence, to love me.

We'll look through the trees at the cliff and the eyrie.
We'll tread round the rath on the track of the fairy.
We'll look on the stars, and we'll list to the river.
Till you ask of your darling what give you can give her.

FAIRY STONES.

In the heart of the hills in Virginia.
In a far away place little known.
Where cicada and wild things inhabit.
Is the place of the crossed fairy stone.

In a myriad shapes they are carven.

And a cross is found on every one;
In the hills in the heart of Virginia,

Where the fairles have wrought in When you come to the river that thunders.
Where the giant pine towers alone,
In the hills in the heart of Virginia,
You are near to the place of the stone.

Where the cardinal swings in the pine And the beetle doth solemnly drone, in the hills in the heart of Virginia. Is the place of the pure fairy stone,

When you feel that 'tis God's voice that whispers,
Through the wild things in sybliant tone,
Look there in the hills of Virginia,
For you're near to the place of the stone.

I invite you to the backwoods, Reflect in the hills all alone. In the hills in the heart of Virginia. In the place of the pure fairy stone,

And love will illumine your being, And peace sing in sweetest of tone; A song for which every heart hungers, Is heard in the place of the stene. In the hills in the heart of Virginia. The voice of God speaks in the moans
Of the wind as it sighs through the pine trees,
In the place of the cross on the stones.
